Published by Doxa Sunny
All rights reserved.

© 2026 Doxa Sunny

Scripture references from various Bible translations.

BLESS BE GOD FOR THE RAIN

A Poetry Collection

By Doxa Sunny

"Discovering Love Through Nature"

For every broken heart searching for love.
For every storm that taught me grace.
For the rain that whispered His name.

You are seen. You are known. You matter.

CONTENTS

Page 1: Copyright/Title Page 1

Page 2: Blank 2

Page 3: Dedication 3

Page 4: Blank 4

Page 5: Introduction 5

Page 6: Blank 6

Page 7: POEM 1: Discovery
The Rain Showed Me 7

Page 8: Blank 8

Page 9: POEM 2: Gratitude
Bless Be God for the Rain 9

Page 10: Blank 10

Page 11: POEM 3: Testing
When the Rain Comes 11

Page 12: Blank 12

Page 13: POEM 4: Timing
The Rain Knows Its Season 13

Page 14: Blank 14

Page 15: POEM 5: Consistency
REGARDLESS 15

Page 16: Blank 16

Page 17: POEM 6: Seeing
I Hear Him in the Rain 17

Page 18: Blank 18

Page 19: POEM 7: Prayer & Healing
For Those the Rain Has Broken 19

Page 20: Blank 20

Page 21: Closing 21

Page 22: Blank 22

Page 23: Connect with Me 23

Page 24: Blank 24

Page 25: About the Author 25

These poems were born from rain.

Not just weather, but a journey.
A realization that what I saw as disruption was actually a love letter.

What I cursed as inconvenience was actually grace.

What I ran from was actually pursuing me.

The rain taught me something radical:
God's love doesn't ask permission.
God's love is REGARDLESS.
It doesn't worry about your imperfections, but chooses you anyways and gets you transformed.

It just IS.
REGARDLESS.

These seven poems are that journey—from complaint to gratitude, from confusion to clarity, from running to receiving.

If you're broken by the rain in your life,
if you're struggling to see love in the storm,
if you're wondering if He's still there—

These poems are for you.

May they open your eyes
the way the rain opened mine.

Bless be God for the rain.

POEM 1: DISCOVERY

The Rain Showed Me

I cursed it first—wet clothes, cancelled plans, the sky falling on my schedules.

But then the farmer prayed for it.
The earth drank it.
The plants rose green and were grateful.

And I realized:
I was looking at love through my own small window.

The rain cares about my comfort. But
Is also concern about everything.

Just like His love.
REGARDLESS of what I wanted,
it keeps coming.
It keeps blessing.
It keeps being.

And I—finally—opened my eyes.

POEM 2: GRATITUDE

Bless Be God for the Rain

The rain came,
and my first instinct was to curse it.
Don't go out.
Clothes will get wet.
Everything will fall apart.

But then—a whisper.
A reminder of what I'd already learned.

And instead of curses,
my lips formed gratitude.

Instead of "Why?"
I said "Thank you."

Instead of running from the storm,
I stood in it.

Not because I'm perfect, not because I don't feel the weight, but because I've seen it—
the blessing hiding in the downpour.

The cooling of the heat.
The nourishment of the earth.
The reminder that He's still reaching.

So today,
instead of my words of ingratitude,
I give Him glory.

BLESS BE GOD FOR THE RAIN.

POEM 3: TESTING

When the Rain Comes

Everything you built in the dry season, the rain will test it.

Your plans, your promises, your structures—they will shake.

Some doors will close.
Some paths will flood.
Some dreams will get drenched.

This is not punishment.
This is not His anger.

This is mercy, though Seems difficult to you

The rain is asking:
Did you build on solid ground?
Or did you build on sand?

Did you make good plans?
Or did you make convenient ones?

Did you consider the whole, or just yourself?

The rain doesn't just care about your comfort.
It cares about the truth.

And when it passes,
what remains standing will be worth keeping.

So when the rain comes,
don't panic.
Don't curse.

Look inward.

Restrategize.
Rebuild.

The rain isn't destroying you.
It's refining you.

REGARDLESS.

POEM 4: TIMING

The Rain Knows Its Season

The rain doesn't come when I schedule it.
It comes when it's meant to.

Not when I need to go out.
Not when I've planned perfectly.
Not when it's convenient.

It comes in its own time.

There's a time for the dry season, when you plant and plan and prepare.

There's a time for the rain,
when everything shifts and shakes.

There's a time for the sun after,
when you see what remains.

And I—
restless, impatient, demanding—have to learn:

His timing isn't cruel.
It's not random.
It's not against me.

It's just... perfect.

Even when it doesn't look like favor, even when it disrupts my schedule,
even when I don't understand,

there's a reason.
There's a purpose.
There's grace.

So when the rain falls at night,
when the timing seems wrong,
when I wanted sun instead,

I remember:
He knows the seasons better than I do.

And I bless Him for the rain.

REGARDLESS of when it comes.

POEM 5: CONSISTENCY

REGARDLESS

Heavy rain came,
and the world wanted to stop.
Plans cancelled.
Schedules paused.
Everything frozen.

But some people kept moving.

They didn't wait for the sun.
They didn't demand perfect conditions.
They didn't give up because the weather changed.

They kept going.

REGARDLESS of the rain.
REGARDLESS of the obstacles.
REGARDLESS of the closed doors.

They knew something:
Stopping doesn't stop the rain.
Complaining doesn't change the weather.
Giving up doesn't make things better.

So they moved forward anyway.

They kept their motivation intact through the severity of the storm.
They kept reading, kept learning, and kept growing.

They faced it head on.
And when their plans scattered,
they built again.

Not because they're superhuman.
But because they understood:

The rain tests consistency, not comfort.

It rewards those who keep going,
not those who wait for easier days.

So keep going.
Keep being you.
Keep moving forward.

Not because the rain will stop.
But because you won't.

REGARDLESS.

POEM 6: SEEING

I Hear Him in the Rain

The rain speaks.
Most people don't listen.

They hear it as noise,
as inconvenience,
as disruption.

But if you pause,
if you still your complaining heart,
if you really listen—

you'll hear His whisper.

"I'm still reaching."
"I'm still blessing."
"I'm still here."

The rain is His love letter.
Written in drops.
Delivered in downpours.

I see it now—
the way it calms the heat,
the way it makes the earth grateful,
the way it comes regardless of our schedules.

Unconditional.
Constant.
Real.

Some days my clothes get drenched.
Some days my plans scatter.
Some days my heart breaks at the chaos.

But underneath,
I hear Him.

"This isn't punishment.

This is love.
This is me,
pouring out everything for you.

Just like you wanted—
to hear it,
to see it,
to feel it.

Here I am.
In the rain.
In the storm.
In the breaking.

REGARDLESS of whether you're ready."

So now when it rains,
I don't just see wet clothes.
I see His heart.

I don't just hear noise.
I hear His voice.

And I thank Him.

For speaking.
For reaching.
For loving me through the rain.

POEM 7: PRAYER & HEALING

For Those the Rain Has Broken

Dear God,
I pray for those whose homes flooded, whose plans drowned,
whose hearts broke with the storm.

I pray for those who saw only destruction, who felt only loss,
who questioned only why.

I pray for those affected by the rain—not because the rain is evil, but because we built badly,
we planned poorly,
we forgot to look inward.

But Lord,
I want them to know:

The rain is not Your judgment.
The rain is not your anger.
The rain is not your punishment.

The rain is Your faithfulness.
The rain is Your love.
The rain is Your promise kept.

You said there would be seasons.
You kept Your word.

And even when we fail,
even when we build on sand,
even when we don't understand—

Your love remains.
Your faithfulness continues.
Your grace is new every morning.

So I ask:
Speak to the broken.
Heal the shattered.
Remind them of Your REGARDLESS love.

Not because the rain will stop.
But because you won't.

Not because everything will be fixed.
But because you are faithful.

Not because they'll understand it all.
But because you never leave.

And Lord, help us all to see—

that even in the midst of chaos, even when doors close,
even when the rain pours,

You are God.
And because You live,
We will see tomorrow.

BLESS BE GOD FOR THE RAIN.
BLESS BE GOD FOR HIS LOVE.
BLESS BE GOD FOR HIS FAITHFULNESS.

REGARDLESS.

Amen.

CLOSING

May you see the rain differently now.
May you hear His whisper in the storm.
May you trust His timing.
May you keep going REGARDLESS.
May you know: His love chooses you.
His love transforms you.
His love is YOURS.

Bless be God for the rain.
Bless be God for His love.

Now it's your turn.

What is the "rain" in your life?
What storm are you running from?
What is He trying to teach you through it?

Open your heart.
Listen for His whisper.
See the love hiding in the downpour.

Your imperfections don't disqualify you.
Your brokenness doesn't make you unlovable.
Your mess doesn't make Him leave.

He chooses you REGARDLESS.
And He's transforming you through it all.

Bless be God for your rain.

CONNECT WITH ME

I'd love to stay connected with you.

Find me here:

Listen to Healing Podcast on Spotify
Read my writing on Medium
Follow me on Instagram: @theDoxa
Connect on Snapchat: doxasunny

Or visit my hub:
linktr.ee/theDoxasunny

(All my links in one place)

Thank you for reading.
You are seen. You are known. You matter.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Doxa Sunny is an author and podcast host dedicated to sharing God's unconditional love through poetry, writing, and real conversations.

Host of Healing Podcast, she believes that God's love is REGARDLESS—not based on performance, perfection, or circumstance, but on His choice to see you, transform you, and love you completely.

Through her writing, voice, and life, she invites broken hearts to discover:
You are seen. You are known. You matter.
Exactly as you are.

She currently resides in Warri, Delta State, Nigeria, where she continues to find God's messages in the rain, in her notebooks, and in the hearts of those searching for real love.

CONNECT WITH ME:

Podcast:” Healing” Podcast (Spotify)
Writing: Medium
Instagram: @realdoxasunny
Snapchat: doxasunny
Everything: linktr.ee/Doxasunny

You are seen. You are known. You matter.